CUBA-NICARAGUA: Support for Central American Revolutionaries

During the past month, Cuba has stepped up training and advice to Central American insurgents and continues to foster the creation and strengthening of support mechanisms in Honduras and Costa Rica for Salvadoran revolutionaries. Direct Nicaraguan involvement with Central American leftists has been limited, although some arms and volunteers may still be flowing to El Salvador.

El Salvador

Cuban President Fidel Castro

forecast the overthrow of the Salvadoran Government during 1980 or 1981. Cuba will host a conference of the Communist parties of Central America, Mexico, and Panama between 15 February and 15 March. The conference will focus on support of the Salvadoran extreme left as well as revolutionary prospects throughout Central America.

Cuban assistance to Salvadoran insurgents continues to be channeled largely through the Honduran Communist Party (PCH). [redacted] the PCH special apparatus agreed early last month to furnish Cuban-trained military instructors to the Popular Liberation Forces (FPL) of El Salvador in March. [redacted] an FPL request in late January to accelerate the arrival of the instructors could not be honored because many of them were still in Cuba undergoing additional training [redacted]
